Colored column indicates liturigal color for that weekend.

Green: Ordinary TimeIn the Catholic Church, Ordinary Time refers to the parts of the liturgical year that do not fall within the major, highly focused seasons of Advent, Christmas, Lent, or Easter. It gets its name from the Latin word ordinalis meaning "numbered" or "ordered", and represents the chronological, week-by-week life of the Church. Not some mundane period of time which is ordinary!

Violet/Purple: Advent, derived from the Latin word adventus (meaning "coming"), it is a time of prayerful preparation and hopeful anticipation for both the celebration of Jesus's birth at Christmas and his eventual second coming.

Rose: Guadette Sunday, the name comes from the Latin word gaudete, which means "rejoice". It serves as a brief pause from Advent's traditional penitential focus to celebrate the nearness of Christmas. symbolizes JOY

White: white symbolizes purity, light, glory, joy, and the triumph of God. It is worn to signify major feasts, particularly those celebrating the life, resurrection, and incarnation of Jesus Christ and new beginnings (such as in baptism and weddings). It is a visual reminder of Christ's triumph over darkness, sin, and death.

Gold: The highest of all liturgical colors, often used interchangeably or in tandem with white. It represents ultimate value, the majesty of God, and the uncreated, radiant divine light of heaven
